The laws of other states and nations may be entirely different from what is described in the Site. Because of these differences, you should not act or rely on any information on the Site without seeking the advice of a competent attorney licensed to practice law in your jurisdiction for your particular problem. Hilton has endeavored to comply with all legal and ethical requirements in developing the Site and does not desire to represent clients based upon their review of any portions of the Site which do not comply with the legal or ethical requirements of the jurisdiction in which the client is located.

This information is not intended to create, and receipt of it does not constitute, a lawyer-client relationship.

Do not send Hilton information until you speak with an individual attorney and receive authorization to send that information to Hilton. If you communicate with Hilton through the Site or otherwise in connection with a matter for which Hilton does not already represent you, your communication may not be treated as privileged or confidential. If you communicate with Hilton by e-mail in connection with a matter for which Hilton already represents you, please remember that Internet e-mail is not secure and you should avoid sending sensitive or confidential Internet e-mail messages unless they are adequately encrypted.

Personal Use of Contents

The content of the Site is for your personal, noncommercial use. Content copied, downloaded, or printed must retain all the copyright, trademark, and other proprietary notices. For commercial use of any portion of the contents you must secure the written consent from Hilton.

Privacy Notice and Document Retention Policy

Since you have chosen to access the Site, Hilton is providing the following information to you:

Hilton may assemble and maintain information relating to the legal services provided. The information that Hilton may assemble and maintain may be obtained from the client, generated as a result of the services provided, or received from third parties. If you are, or become, a client of Hilton, you should know that all information that Hilton receives from a client is held in confidence, and is not released to people outside the firm, except as agreed to by the client, or as allowed or required under applicable law and the rules of professional conduct governing the provision of legal services.

If you become a client, Hilton will retain records relating to professional services that Hilton provides so that its attorneys will be better able to assist clients with their needs, and in some cases, to comply with professional guidelines. In order to guard clients' nonpublic personal information, or the nonpublic information of business entities, Hilton maintains physical, electronic, and procedural safeguards that comply with professional standards and generally exceed the requirements imposed under federal law.

Generally, Hilton retains information in its files until completion of the matter to which that information relates. Thereafter, those files may be purged and placed in storage or returned to the client. Hilton may retain copies of files returned to clients. Files retained by Hilton after completion of a matter are not retained or marked for destruction in accordance with a fixed schedule. Instead, inactive files are maintained until Hilton determines that those files are no longer useful in rendering services to the client or are not otherwise required in connection with our role as counsel or former counsel.
